Creating During COVID; Stay at Home Artists

MSU sophomore theater students create a YouTube channel to show how we are using our art to stay positive during a crisis.

In a time a cancelations, isolation, netflix fixation, and overall trepidation the desire to remain curled in bed all day is constantly looming if not overwhelming. As our hearts go out to our first responders and those most affected by COVID 19, staying home seems like a small sacrifice to make while awaiting a more permanent solution. But for us go getters, creators, and problem-solvers one of the hardest things to do is do nothing. The MSU theater class of 2022 have been using this time to learn new skills, practice new pieces, and make some content that just might make you laugh out loud (lol as the kids say).
